The L.O.C.K.UP. training differentiated itself from other Defensive tactics programs being instructed throughout the country.

"Not a technique-based training system but the emphasis is on the actual collection of data on the use of force incidents, and detailed reporting to determine the effectiveness and needs assessments of the officers on the street."

A coordinated team response model for safely managing highly agitated individuals while reducing injuries, exertion, and liability
Assessment - Control to Care

This specialized training program prepares officers to safely manage high-risk encounters involving individuals experiencing extreme behavioral or medical crisis. The course integrates lecture, demonstration, and scenario-based training to develop instructors in Team Coordinated Control Tactics that enhance safety, reduce risk, and improve operational effectiveness. Poorly coordinated responses to highly agitated individuals can increase medical distress, physical exertion, and exposure to civil liability or public scrutiny. This program provides structured, team-based strategies that support controlled restraint, efficient stabilization, and measured decision-making during critical incidents. These events are reasonable foreseeable. Train the officers ahead of time to prepare.

Instruction emphasizes coordinated movement, communication protocols, positional awareness, integrated medical response and controlled transitions that prioritize both officer safety and subject welfare.

Measurable Operational Outcomes

- Reduced duration of physical struggles and restraint events
- Decreased officer and subject injury rates
- Lower levels of excessive physical exertion during team engagements
- Improved documentation and articulation of coordinated actions
- Increased consistency in team response protocols
- Reduced civil liability related to restraint and medical transiti
- Improved EMS–law enforcement coordination
- Safer transfer of subjects into medical care
